HONGRONG, JULY 19TH, 1875.

According to the Japan Gazette the Mr.

Kapo's Government would seem to have little faith in the loyalty of the people. They have adopted many of the institutions and customs of European Administrations, and conceded many privileges to the people; but now they coral patch, awash at low water, lying one milappear to be afraid that the wheels of progress are moving too fast, and that the car of liberty may escape from control. This perhaps is natural. So many and such sud- confirm the Ordinance to provide means for Ayoung that one of the men was a district watchden changes have been effected in the Land coforcing good order and discipline in the Poof the Rising Sun during the past few years that if the Government in a brief pause have looked back and considered the rate has been excessive it will not be surprising to Harbour-Master's Office, Praya West, the maxioutside observers. They have been ad mum was 89 and the minimum 82. The vancing year by year neaver to the realisation greatest rainfall was on the 14th instant, when of a Constitutional Government, in lieu of the old despotic dual Monarchy. The native Press has eagerly availed itself of the opverging on sedition. Its power was daily sent to one month's hard labour at the Captain's growing; its influence daily extending. The order. Government began to grow uneasy, and watched this growth of journalistic power public opinion was being educated too fast. And therefore the Press laws were passed. We have already given an outline of these, Curtis, Cordes, Cohen, &c. which, though almost avowedly designed to bridle the Press, are much milder than might have been expected from a Government so lately brought into contact with the civilisation of the West. It is probable that they will by and bye see the wisdom of relaxing porty of firms on the Prays. some of the rules. Their noighbourhood to the Great Republic of America cannot fail to have some influence over their policy, and i may safely be prosumed that when the native Press is more competent to exercise full liborty, it will not be withheld. At present there is little doubt that many journals are not able to distinguish between liberty and license. But the Government, on its part, must take care not to draw the rein too tightly. The Consorship of the Press does not exist in England ; in France attempts to gag it have more than once been fatal to the Governments who were rash enough to indulge in them. THE war in Acheen still drags its slow length along. It is one of these disagreeable cam- with you in algning the Memorial of the 5th paigns, which, owing to local circumstances. can at the will of the combatants be almost indefinitely prolonged, and is eminently calculated to damp the ardour of European troops. There is neither profit nor glory to be reaped in the fight. The unbealthy climate is, too, on the side of the natives, and more soldiers probably succumby to disease than fall in battle. The Dutch are in no small degree disgusted with their task, and their general has resolved to put himself on the defensive, in the bope that the enemy will weary of making fruitless attacks. This may perhaps be the wisest course, and probably save some apparently useless slaughter, but it is doubtful whether such a course is likely to mise the prestige of Dutch arms in Sumatra. It is difficult, of course, for those at a distance to judge of the best course to pursue; but it seems to us that it would prove more advantageous to both parties to bring the struggle to a speedy issue. The Orders for Copies may be sent to the Daily Ashantee campaign was not won by resting on the defensive attitude. The British troops pressed on, in spite of all difficulties, to Coomassie, and read King Correct a severe lesson in a few short months. Their rapid march taught the savage menarch that he had a fee to deal with who despised obstacles, and would not be trifled with. One decisive ster HALL& HOLTZ and KELLY like that will, as a rule, do more to impress the uncivilised mind with respect for European prowess and resources than a hundred successful skirmishes. EDUCATION IN CHINA AND JAPAN. Per the first time in history public opinion in China is beginning to make itself heard in favour of a Western system of popular education. An influential appeal to the Government at Peking for the introduction of competitive examinations in branches of European knowedgo in the case of youths seeking official appointments shows a marked advance in the progress of civilisation in that great Empire. A few steps further will anffice to bring it into closer communion than it has ever been brought before with the outside world. Then the vast, natural resources of the country will become developed according to most advanced methods. tores of historical riches, too, will be opened. And in due time the energies of a dense, active, and intelligent population will be brought into direct competition with that of foreign lands. Japan was once quite as exclusive in regard to foreigners as China has ever been. During the authority of the Taicuns, or, more correctly; the Sho-guns, the absolute exclusion of all foreign influences was an essential part of the public policy; and that authority, which began in the twelfth century, was maintained, with some occasional changes of degree, down to the year 1868. With its fall a remarkable era of rapid progress began. In 1871 the feudal system was abolished. A Department of Public Education was established, and placed under the control of a netive of singular ability and vigour. In 1872, by one of those sudden acts of which only a paternal and more or less despote covernment is capable. 53,000 public schools were created throughout he Empire, and in all of these the same brunches of knowledge as those which are being anltivated in the schools here and in England bodses on a little etreet called Beaulah etreet | assiduity. It must be remarked that under the old system, the Japanese were never an uneducated people. Mr. W. E. Griffia, who was formerly connected with the Imperial Jupanese College at Tokio, says that schools and colleges. literature and learning, flourished exceedingly under the Sho-gun regime. Nine-tenths of the people could read and write, books were cheap, and circulating libraries were to be found in every town. The soil, therefore, was well prepared for the introduction of a more complete system of education. But in China the same conditions exist, and as soon as Western ideas are once adopted, progress there will be hardly eas rapid .- New York Times.

MINERAL SPRINGS IN ALGERIA. The abundance of mineral and warm springs ENGAGING OREWS BY THE DAY OR in Algeria, and their possible share in the future prosperity of the country, has lately formed the subject of some noteworthy letters in the Akh. bar, Journal de l'Algérie. The writer says that, the evils arising out of the daily expanding while every summer the wealthier French in-. habitants take flight to Europe, they have at leaving them " to find themselves in provisions," hand bealth resorts offering picturesque and which conduces neither to health nor to discibygienic advantages equal to Luchon, Vicby, pline. PROMOTION IN THE NAVY. The Morning Post trusts that the discussion in the House of Commons on the question of promotion in the Navy will bear good fruit. There can be no doubt, the Post adds, that stagnation in the Navy has been very prevalent, and that many Officers have become disboartened and discontented at their prospects. Of late the rule has been promotion by seniority; and the exception promotion by selection. reverse the plan and go back to that of old times would breed a discontent in the Navy that would for overbalance any benefit from the change. The men who do their duty efficiently, but quietly, and without interest to push their claims, would be superseded, and would feel that they had been done out of their legitimate rewards. Benjority, tempered by selection, may be enignored would give rise to infinite dissatisfue- masters serving under the innovations, and dured; but selection with seniority almost in mind that contentment in the service is one. of the first things to be attended to. A CHARMING WOMAN. BY JOHN G. SALE. A charming woman, I've heard it said By other women as light as she; But all in vain I puzzie my head To find wherein the charm may be. Her face, indeed, is pretty enough, And her form is quito as good as the best, Where nature has given the bony stuff, And a clever muliner all the rest.

Intelligent? Yes-in a certain way, With the feminine gift of ready speech, And knows very well what not to say Whenever the thems transverds her reach. But turn the topic on things to wear, From an opera cionk to a robs de nuit-Hats, basques, or bonnets-twill make you stare . To see how fluent the lady can be:

Her lough is hardly a thing to please; For an honest langh must always start From a gleesome mood, like a sudden breeze, And hers is a purely matter of ort-A muscular motion made to show What nature designed to lie beneath The finer mouth ; but what can she do; If that is mined to show the teeth?

To her seat in church -a good half mile-When the day is fine she is sure to go, Armyed, of course, in the latest style La mode de Paris has got to show, And she puts her hands on the velvet pow (Can hands so white have a thint of sin?) And thinks how her prayer-book's tipt of blue Must harmonize with her milky skin!

And what shall we say of one who walks In fields of flowers to choose the weeds? Reads authors of whom she never talks, And talks of anthors she mover reads? Sho's a charming woman I've heard it said Dy other women as light as she;

But oil in vain I puzzle my head To find wherein the charm may be.

> GARRICK'S "CHINESE FESTIVAL Mr. Dutton Cook, writing in Belgravia on "Ballets and Ballet-Dancers," gives a variety of historic notes, which are exceedingly curious. One passage we quote, showing how David Garrick was treated by London audiences on the occasion of his production of the too famous Chinese Festival "In England ballet has enjoyed many trouble, for instance, at Drury Lane Theatre in 1755, when Mr. Garrick's Chinese Festival with its French dancers was sterely, even savagely, condemned by the audience. The manager was overfond of spangles and speciacles, or inclined to over-estimate his public's regard for such matters, and a sharp but necessary lesson was read to him upon that occasion. Then he was very obstinate, and in such wise, roused the British lion inordinately.
